Outrageous Story: 15 minutes to make.

> I went down to Orange, Massachusetts, it was my twenty-first birthday and my stepfather, Todd, told me he'd buy me a ticket to go skydiving. Can't remember what I was wearing for shoes; but the dude behind the counter pointed at my feet and said, „Those shoes will fall off."
> A friendly onlooker peered through the top of her sunglasses, and back to the sky. She held a grocery bag with a pair of sneakers,
> "Take mine, I couldn't go, I chickened out. Keep Them, I won't use them."
> They were 2 ½ sizes too small.
> JUMPSUIT/ZIP UP/HELMET, „Climb aboard, You want to pull the cord?"
> I said, „Ya" and my Guide strapped me to his chest like a 'Baby Carlos' front-pack.
> Up we went-ears popping all the way-pins and needles prickling every inch of skin. 13,000 feet: one single skydiver opened up the door. With one last look: he smiles, and falls out left-side-down. One-By-One we fall out; our Guides pushed us closer the front.
> Whether I liked it or not, my Guide pushed me to the lip of the doorway,
> „Ready, Set, GO!"
> We Somersaulted, my heart halted for two seconds of freefalling. The last thing they saw of me was the purple of my socks; embroidered with I Heart Jesus, nine and a half's crammed in a size seven Reebok.
